

W1 Scale & Stakeholder

WHAT THIS FRAME MEANS

When you use this frame, you think about who is affected by a policy or decision — and at what level. Some effects land on individuals. Others land on communities, institutions, or entire countries. Good speakers at this level move between those levels clearly.

WHAT TO TRY

- Identify at least two different groups affected by the issue
- Show how the impact is different for each group
- Move from a smaller scale (individual, local) to a larger scale (national, global) — or the reverse

SENTENCE STARTERS

- "At the individual level, this policy would..."
- "For lower-income families specifically, the impact would be..."
- "While workers might benefit from..., employers would face..."
- "The burden falls disproportionately on..."

EXAMPLE IN ACTION

"A tuition-free university policy affects students directly by removing financial barriers. At the institutional level, universities lose revenue and may cut programs. At the national level, a more educated workforce could increase productivity — but the tax burden shifts to citizens who may never attend university themselves."
